WHY HE KNEW M'CORMACK

POLICE METHODS IN THE CUN-NINGHAM MURDER CASE,

A Reeper in the Norkville Prison Swenrs that Capt, Martens Pointed Out Me. Cormack to the Boy Who Bays Re Saw Illm Straugle the Girl-McCormack Hold, No new evidence sgainst Edward McCormack, who is charged with the murder of little Mary Cunningham, developed yesterday, but at the examination in the case, held in the York ville Police Court, young Joseph Marone, the Italian boy who claims to have seen McCormack strangling the girl, repeated the story he told the police on Tuesday afternoon in a straightforward way that convinced many who heard him that he was telling the truth. The police admit that they have little corroborative evidence, and say that their case against Mc-Cormack will have to rest almost entirely on young Marone's story. They are now seeking witnesses whose testimony will show beyond a doubt that the boy was in the house at the time the murder took place. This fact established the police think, any fair-minded jury will believe the lad's story.

The only persons who can testify to this are the little girl who ordered the ice from Marone's father, and in delivering which Marone says ho stumbled into the Cuningham flat and saw Mc-Cormack strangling the girl; and a man who lives on one of the upper floors whom Marone questioned while looking for the person who had ordered the ice. Capt. Martens said yesterday that he thought he would be able to find the little girl, but had his doubts about finding the man, unless the latter, hearing that he is wanted, came forward voluntarily and offered his testimony. The Captain says that he knows the name of the girl who ordered the ice and that she lives in the house where the murder was committed. Since the arrest of McCormack, however, he says, she has been smuggled away and has not been seen in the neighborhood. He has a clue to her present whereabouts, however he says, and thinks he can find her in a few

An interesting controversy has arisen between the police and the prisoner McCormack's lawvictim of persecution and that the police are trying to make a scapecoat of him. He says that the identification of McCormack at the Yorkville prison on Tuesday by the boy Marone was a farce from beginning to end, and in a measure his charge is substantiated by the Warden of the prison and one of the keepers. The charge is that Capt. Martens took Marone o the prison before Inspector Brooks did, and had McCormack brought out for inspection. The Captain, it is alleged, pointed at McCormack and said:

Marone said that it was. Later on Inspector Brooks brought the Italian to the prison and told him to walk around the cells and see if he could see in any of them the man whom he had seen strangling Mary Cunningham. The boy naturally picked out McCormack, and the latter's lawyer says that was the whole of the great identification of which the police have said so much.

The first man called at the examination in the Yorkville Police Court was young Farrell, who has been under arrest as a suspect from the first.
Inspector Brooks told Mugistrate Crane that missal. The Maristrate said that Farrell might go, and the youth lost no time in getting out. When the case against McCormack was taken up the first witness called was John Farrell, who lives in one of the upper flats of the house at 315 East Thirty-seventh street. Hesaid that he heard a great noise on the day of the murder, and went down stairs to see what it was all about. There some one told him that Mary Cunningham had been murdered, and he stood on the stoop talking it over with a man named Carroll. While they were talking McCormack came out, and the witness asked Carroll who he was, suggesting that he ought to be watched. Carroll followed McCormack to Thirty-seventh street and Park avenue, and there caused his arrest.

The witness declared that McCormack didn't stand.

"Now, Joseph," said the Inspector, "tell the story of all you saw just as you told it to me "Will you tell the truth?" asked Magistrate Sure I will," said the boy. "I don't tell no

"Sure I will.
lies."
"And do you know what an oath is?" asked Lawyer Fennell, who represents McCormack.
Marone looked around uneasily, so Lawyer
Fennell asked the Court to declare him incompetent to testify on the ground that he knew petent to testify, on the ground that he knew nothing of the nature of an oato.

The Court overruled him, and then Marone went on and told the story as it appeared in yesterday's StN. When on cross-examination the witness said that the door of the Cunningham kitchen opened from the left-hand side, the coursel for the defence declared that it opened just the other way, and that when open it shet off the view of all the flat save a haif of the kitchen.

off the view of all the flat save a haif of the kitchen.

When Inspector Brooks interpolated that the boy might have been mistaken in his statement. Lawyer Fennell grew very much excited.

"That will do," he thundered. "This whole matter has been an outrage from the first, and I'll not stand by and let you make another 'Frenchy' case out of it."

The Magistrate rapped for order, and then Inspector Brooks took the witness in hand again. During the course of his examination the boy said that the girl and man were in the kitchen when he saw them. Lawyer Fennell took copious notes at this point. Then he got the Magistrate to make the witness go over the story again. This done, he declared that it was a most astonishing statement, inasmuch as the girl's body had been found two rooms from the kitchen. It didn't seem to occur to him that the body might have been dragged there after the girl was killed.

girl's body had been found two rooms from the kitchen. It didn't seem to occur to him that the bedy might have been dragged there after the girl was killed.

At this juncture Capt. Martens asked to be allowed, in view of criticisms which had be almade, to tell how the man McCormack had been identified by Marone. Permission being granted, he said that he took the boy to the prison on Tuesday, and took him to Farrell's cell first, where he showed him Farrell and four other prisoners. Then he brought him down stairs and took him past the cells. The boy stopped at McCormack's cell, he said, and identified the man.

"Now are you sure you've stated what occurred correctly?" asked Lawyer Fennell.

"I am," responded the Captain.

"Well," said Fennell, "If a keeper of the prison came here and swore that you came to the jail, said nothing about the boy, but asked to see McCormack, took the boy straight to the cell, let him see him, and then asked him if that was the man, making no effort to see anybody else, would be telying?"

"He would," replied Capt, Martens.

Then Lawyer Fennell called Patrick Galiagher, a keeper in the Yorkville prison, to the said, and asked him to tell about the Captain's visit to the jail on Tuesday.

"The Captain came to the gate," said Gallagher, "and asked to see McCormack. He told he who he was and I let him in and pointed out McCormack's cell to him. At the same time I told him that Farrell's cell was upabove, thinking he might want to see him, too. The Captain walked out I remarked. What did you find out? and he replied. "We ve got the right party."

"Dain't I tell you I wanted to take the boy in to identify a prisoner?" saked Capt, Martens.

"You did not," replied Gallagher. "You said nothing about identification."

"I just want to show how these reform police are trying to duplicate the Frenchy episode," put In Lawyer Fennell.

Young Marone was put on the stand again at this point, and under cross-examination he admitted that he had seen McCormack walking along the street with a policeman mitted that he had seen McCormack walking along the street with a policeman a few minutes after his arreat. He knew then, he said, that it was the man he had seen strangling the girl a short time before, but he said nothing because he was afraid of being arrested himself.

Magistrate Crane, at the conclusion of the examination, said that there was nothing for him to do but to hold McCormack without ball to await the action of the Coroner. So McCormack was led back to jail. When he got in there the following note from his wife was handed to him:

"Ed: Keep up your courage like a good man. God blees you. I know that you are innocent, and I pray for you always. L. McCormack."

ALL FOR A BAG OF BUITERNUTS.

A 16-year-old Boy Beats a Woman So Bodly that Her Death Is Expected, KINGSTON, N. Y., June 3.- Daniel Bassett, 16 rears of age, has been employed by M. A. Tresler, berry cup manufacturer, whose factory is about two and a half miles south of Highlands. On Sunday afternoon he got into a quarrel with Mary Ann Wells, 30 years old, a domestic employed by Tresler, and beat her about the head and body with a stick. The woman is in a critical condition, and her death is more probable than recovery. Bassett is locked up county jail to await the action of the Grand

Early in last week Bassett and the woman had trouble over the ownership of a bag of butternuts which were in the Treeler barn. Just house and went to the barn where the nuts . were. She picked up the bag and started with it toward the house, intending to put it away in her room. She had walked about haif the distance between the house and the burn when Bassett, who had followed her from the house, met her. They had some conversation in angry tones, and then the boy struck her with a stick. He hit her first on the head, and then about the shoulders. She fell to the ground, and Bassett jumped on her body. The woman screamed, and a small girl who lives in the house ran to her assistance. The girl bit Bassett on the arm, and he stepped beating Miss Wells long enough to knock her defender down. By this time the screams of the wohad brought Mr. Tresler and several others out of the house. When Bassett saw help coming her an for a harn a quarter of a inile away, and hid under the hay mow. He lay there until James Ree raked him out and arrested him. The injured woman was carried to her room and was attended by Mr. Tresler's physicians. Justice Smith held Bassett for the Grand Jury. were. She picked up the bag and started with Inspector Kenny, the Secretary says, intimated that the boxes would be passed services yesterday afternoon over the body of services.

DIDN'T PAY THE CABMAN.

After Being Arrested Mrs. Sherman Gave Him 55 More Than His Charge.

Mrs. Florence Sherman, a well-dressed woman of 40, was a prisoner in Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning. The complainant against her was Matthew Morrissey, a cabman. Morrissey said that Mrs. Sherman, who is stopping at the Hotel Brunswick, engaged him vesterday at the Hotel Brunswick, engaged him yesterday afternoon and ran up a bill of $2. Then she hold him that she had only $1.00, and he caused her arrest.

In court Mrs. Sherman said her home was in Minnesota, and that she had pienty of money. On the day before, she said, she had had two glasses of wine for dinner, and she thought that the wine must have gone to her head. She offered to pay the cabman, so he did not press the compaint.

Mrs. Sherman then produced a large roll of bills and handed Morrissey $2. Then sie selected a $5 bill and placed that in his hand. Morrissey smiled joyously. "Thank you, lady," said he; "pleased to serve you again."

JERSEY CITY POLICE PRAISED.

Editor Martin's Stolen Property Promptly

Thomas H. Martin, the editor of Dirie of Atlanta, Ga., thinks the police of Jersey City are clever men. On Tuesday evening, while he was waiting in the Pennsylvania Railroad depot in Jersey City to take the Southern express train, he laid his valise, a care containing a train, he laid his value, a care containing a dress suit, and his umbrella and cane on a seat while he went over to the newspaper stand to pick out something to read on the trip. When he returned his goods had disappeared. A telephone message was sent to Folice Headquarters, and Mr. Martin started off on the train, never expecting to hear of his stoien property again. When the train reached Trenton he found a despatch from Jersey City telling him that his property had been recovered. He returned to Jersey City and got it. The satchel was found in one pawn shop and the other articles in another.

Corporation Counsel Scott made a ruling yesterday concerning the payment of city money to charitable institutions that receive children ommitted by City Magistrates. The city pays $2 a week each for such children, and the various institutions report every month to the Comptroller the number of children received, Comptroller the number of children received, and thit report is turned over to the Gerry society to be audited. That society recently reported against five boys received by the Catholic Protectory, and certain questions were raised which were referred to the Corporation Counsel. The first question was whether institutions secisiving boys between 14 and 18 years old were entitled to receive money for them. The answer was that they were. The other question was whether boys committed as "ungovernable" could be received under the law which specifies only "idle, truant, vicious, or homeless" children. Mr. Scott decided that "ungovernable" children should be included, and advised the Comptroller that the objection of the Gerry society would not stand.

THE ECOLOGICAL GARDEN.

Sinking Fund Commission Opposed to Grant-ing the Bronz Park Site. The plan of the New York Zoblogical Garden Society to establish a garden in Bronx Park south of Pelham avenue, using 261 acres for the purpose, received a decided setback at the meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission yesterday. The application of the society for the land was made some time ago, and it was referred to Gen. McCook, Comptroller Fitch, and Alderman Olcott. Gen. McCook made a report yesterday. He said that there were many considerations that must be weighed. The first was the accessibility of the proposed site to the general public. He said that if the garden was located there it would be almost a mile from any transit point, and would undoubtedly cause a great deal of inconvenionce to those wishing to go to the garden. Moreover, Gen. McCook reminded the members of the Sinking Fund Commission that the site proposed had cost the city

"I am not at all sure," said he, "that the people will consent to the turning over of such a valuable tract of land to a private corporation, for that is what it practically amounts to. As I understand it," he continued, "all the New York Zoological Garden Society proposes to do for the city is to establish the garden. The question of maintenance is one that the city must provide for. In my judgment this means at least $100,000 a year. I admit that the rev-must provide for. In my judgment this means at least $100,000 a year. I admit that the revenue from the garden which is to revert to the society will be small, for, under the law, the garden will have to be open to the public free of charge on the days of the week, including Sundays. Fot I fear that it would establish a bad procedent."

Mayor Strong agreed with Gen. McCook's opinions. He said that the whole thing meant the turning over of 261 agres of public land to a private corporation, and that should never be done. "The residents in the immediate vicinity of the proposed site," said the Mayor, "are protesting against the location of the garden, there. If we want a great zoological garden let's get one of our own. We have now the nucleus of one. I don't think that we should get into this business at all."

The matter was then dropped for the time being without farther discussion.

The Executive Committee of the Zoological Society at a meeting yesierday appointed an advisory oard to be called a "Scientific Council," which will act with the director in all questions of scientific nature that may arise. It consists of ten men who are leaders in their various branches of learning. They are: William T. Hornady. Chairman, director New York Zoological Park; Madison Grant, Secretary ex-officio, Secretary New York Zoological Society; Prof. J. A. Allen, curator of manmalogy and ornithology. Osboro, Da Costa professor of zoology, Columbia University; Prof. William Stratford, College of the City of New York Prof. W. Gliman Thomson, University of New York, Prof. W. Gliman The Executive Committee decided to send month.

A resolution expressing the thanks of the society to Assemblyman Niles for securing the chactment of the law incorporating the society was passed, and he was also elected a member of the society. A meeting of the Executive Committee and the special committee at the Sinking Fund Commission will soon be held.
